

Library Lover's Week

Progressive Story

It was a dark & stormy night and the library staff at Hamilton TAFE were getting ready for the new classes to arrive. Suddenly, all the lights went off and the building was thrown into darkness.

Having set plans for the night, Sharne was annoyed about the turn of events. Spending Valentines night in the library in complete darkness was not in her category of romantic fun. She decided to investigate the best way to escape and get to her hot date for the night...

As Sharne left the library she ran into the 2 Dean's who offered to help make chocolate surprises to take on her date.

However they needed help with what they could do to make something special for Sharne so sent their Baking Class 101 to the Library to research some recipes. Whilst doing their research, they came across some amazing chocolatiers doing some very creative things in the French Region of Provence – so they started daydreaming about travelling to France, visiting the old cities, climbing the Eiffel tower and sipping coffee on the Rive Gauche.

Just then a man appeared before them. He looked ancient; he was dishevelled with a long beard and wearing clothes from the French resistance. The man looked confused and a bewildered.

Sharne, who spoke fluent French approached him and asked if he was OK? After a pause, the man burst into song.

This gentleman was singing happily away with all his might when around him appeared other things, a carriage, horses, the countryside and the group found themselves transported through time. The students looked at each other. Shocked and confused through nonverbal clues the students looked at each other, what had happened? Where were they? Slowly the truth dawned on them.

That valentine is just around the corner and he has no idea what the love of his life (book) wants. This book contained many chapters and concluded with a cliff hanger. This gentleman was madly in love with his books and his new love of his life. But the question remains, can he make room for both of them?

There was a crash of thunder & suddenly they were all transported back to Hamilton TAFE but this time they were in

The foyer, and the security officer asked them why they were there when she was locking up. She was quite stern, and was asking them to leave when Dean & Dean appeared with a tray of exquisite chocolates. They had a special box packed just for Sharne to take with her. She thanked them profusely as she left with the mysterious singing Frenchman to attend the restaurant at Hamilton TAFE where they had a sumptuous meal prepared by the students.
